2024 VINTAGE

Miguel Torres Chile produces wines from the Limarí Valley in the far north to the Osorno Valley in the far south, covering a distance of 1,300 kilometers.

This vintage was one of the longest, beginning on January 2 with our Limarí Chardonnay and ending on May 9 with our Huerta de Maule Carmenere in the Maule Valley. Given Chile's length, climate diversity, and climate change, it is increasingly important to divide Chile's wine-growing regions into three zones:

1. North with a semi-arid climate (Huasco to Aconcagua)
2. South-central with a Mediterranean climate (Maipo to Bio Bio)
3. South with a temperate climate heavily influenced by the ocean (Malleco to Osorno).

In terms of quality, we can say that it is a great year. We returned to the past in terms of climate, forgetting the drought in the central and southern areas, with cooler temperatures than previous seasons, achieving very fresh wines with moderate alcohol content and very good quality tannins. A vintage in this area to remember and one that will certainly be talked about. The 2024 harvest will be remembered for its excellent quality for the vast majority of the vineyards we produce from the far north in Limarí to the Osorno Valley, even though the climatic conditions were very different at both ends.
